What is IAED?

International Agency for Economic Development

Working with the United Nations since 1990:
Assisting Developing Countries to Obtain Sustainable Economic Development.

IAED is a Non-Profit Charitable Organization, which solves problems in countries by providing free (without debt) Economic Development Projects, by empowering a countries own people to solve their own problems.

The Agency is a result of a problem Dr. Gell solved in 1990 when he realized that there was no International Agency for Economic Development in the United Nations, The US Government, the European Union, and nowhere in Asia which helps countries without debt.

IAED is made up of only three functions/activities:

- 1.) IAED the organization.
- 2.) Weekly UNTV Global Broadcasts/Webcasts of UN Ambassadors/World Leaders.
- 3.) Projects in Countries. (Main Goal of IAED).

All three of these functions/activities are a result of Dr. Gell solving a problem or series of problems.

The world's first, and still only, weekly one hour (uncut-unedited-uncensored) UN TV broadcast/webcast interviews of the World's Ambassadors and Leaders is a problem solved for the UN Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Under-Secretary General for the Department of Public Information in 1994.

IAED Projects are focused on a country's need to solve problems to speed up economic and social development of their own countries. Projects are based on Dr. Gell's successful 50+ years of international consulting experience solving problems for the Leaders worldwide in countries and the world's largest corporations.

“The United Nations and most NGO's are organizations full of problems, looking for solutions.
IAED is an organization (backed by 50+ years of experience) full of solutions, looking for problems.”
